

Indian farmers in one of the districts One day he came to the Agency in his lumber wagon followed by his pack of dogs. The Major was always glad to see him for he had always tried to carry out orders from the Major's office.

Major McLaughlin said, "Kangipa, you have tried nearly every thing in the way of farming but there is one thing you have not tried. Why don't you start raising hogs?" Kangipa replied "I would Major, but I could not for the simple reason hogs cannot follow my wagon like the dogs."

The Indians were gathering at the Indian Agency for rations. At these gatherings White people in the neighboring towns would come for curiosity sake and sometimes on business. A White man, evidently a new comer, drove over to see the natives. He hitched his team near where there were quite many Indians had likewise tied their teams. The White man, looked
