Dear Mr. Frink:

Thanks a million for your great kindness in sending me the Graphic Magazine of the Chicago Sunday Tribune for September 4, 1949 containing your most interesting article "Mr. Red Cloud Goes to Washington" and the interpretation of that rare photograph with which it is illustrated. I enjoyed it thoroughly and learned quite a bit from your account.

There is one detail, however, which I believe to be in error. The statement that the seven council fires of the Sioux Nation were represented. The tribes you mention were all sub-tribes of the Teton Council Fire which was only one of the seven, the other six living east of the Missouri--the Santees, Leaf Shooters, etc.

It isn't often that anyone can provide such an interesting article full of new stuff on such well known figures. I congratulate you and thank you again for letting me have a copy of your article.

With kindest regards,

Yours cordially,

W. S. CAMPBELL
