

I have been told that Sitting Bull was made war chief of all the nation because he was the bravest man of all. I would like to know what was the bravest deed of Sitting Bull.

Sitting Bull and his warriors fought with the Crow Indians close to the big bend on the Missouri river. A hostile Crow Indian charged with a gun, and Sitting Bull had a gun too, they both charged and both shot at the same time. Sitting Bull killed his enemy & his enemy shot Sitting Bull's foot.

The bravest deed is when they had a big battle with the Hells, and he charged, and killed his enemy at the age of fourteen years old. This was the first brave deed of Sitting Bull.

I have heard that Sitting Bull once fought with the Crows and had only three arrows. The Crow Indian had no arrows at all. So Sitting Bull shot two arrows where the Crow could get them, and then charged him and killed him with the one arrow. Is this true? Where did this happen? When?

Yes this is a fact but one Bull doesn't remember it just when it happened.

This happened right at the mouth of Rosebud River where it emptys into the Missouri river on the north side of the Missouri river.

Tatanka-witko and Tasunka-siyanka were with him at the time this happened.
