Rainy Butte, at the head of Cedar Creek took place a battle Sioux and Crows. The Crows made a charge on the Sioux but were repulsed. In this fight Jumping Bull and a Crow warrior had a hand to hand combat in which Jumping Bull was stabbed and killed. Crow women and children were behind and were captured and brought and turn over to Sitting Bull. The Sioux wished to kill the Crow Captives but Sitting Bull did not wish this done. He said: "If you intend to do this for, my sake take good care of them and let them live. My father is a man and death is his! They were released at once and returned to their people.

IX I have been told that the Sioux warriors wore eagle feathers to show what their brave deeds had been. What feathers did Sitting Bull wear? I would like to know just what feathers he had a right to wear and why? Sitting Bull wears his eagle feather laying cross ways for bravery. When he reached the position of chief over all the chiefs, he wore his eagle feather standing straight up.

X One thing I forgot to ask your father was about the fight with the Assinaboines (Hohe) where he captured his adopted brother "Little Assinaboine" or Jumping Bull. Where did this happen? How old were Jumping Bull and Sitting Bull when this happened? Why did Sitting Bull take pity upon this young man? Were they fighting with guns, or how? Who else was there? What did Sitting Bull do and say? What did the captured boy do and say? I would like to know all about this story because it shows Sitting Bull's big heart.
