

No. 1 -- When He (Sitting Bull) prayed, he pointed his pipe to the four winds (north, south, east and west) and when he did, he could foretell anything.

No. 2 -- Sitting Bull had a fight with a Flathead Indian. Sitting Bull killed the Flathead. An arrow from the Flathead penetrated the left arm of Sitting Bull. This happened at Shell River.

No. 3 -- Sitting Bull went with a war party to the Devil's Lake country. (Minnewakan) Spirit Water.

No. 4 -- Come on! Come on!

No. 5 -- Sitting Bull was born up the Grand River, near his home, in the Spring (March) the year when Yellow Eyes played in the snow. (1831)

No. 6 -- Sitting Bull adopted One Bull when the latter was four years old and raised him as his own child.

No. 7 -- Farthest south. Where the Missouri river empties into the Mississippi.

No. 8 -- Farthest north. Flackfeet country. We were called up there for council. One Bull, Long Bull, Many Bags, Loves War, White Crow Blanket.

Sitting Bull talked with Crow Foot about a gold mine. Crow Foot was a Blackfoot Chief. Crow Foot said to Sitting Bull "You are a great Chief among all the Indians, and we want you to look into this matter of the gold mine for us." Sitting Bull, said "How" One of the signers to this gold mine treaty was Four Horns. He was a Sioux Indian.

No. 9 -- At the mouth of Tongue River the Sioux Indians went to make a treaty, but they were all killed. Sitting Bull did not like the outcome of this parley, but never said anything. Red Skirt, Hollow-horn-Bear, Drum, and many others went there but I cannot recall their names. Sitting Bull and his band of warriors returned thirty head of horses to the Crow Indians. This was up the Missouri River near what is known as Big Bend. One year before the "Battle of Killdeer Mountains" (North Dakota) the