

sing. They must throw away everything of value that one possesses. It is different from the mild display of grief the white people show.