

"When I give a friend a gift, I give it for all time!" I also bought a caserly grey horse from Sitting Bull, belonging to the United States Army. He had four numerical units branded into his front foot - doubtless taken at the time of the massacre. - The same afternoon after I bought the horse, I put him amongst our other horses into the studs our Boy Company's post at Fort Du'Appelle our post having been bounded with wooden rails and the Du'Appelle River itself answering as a boundary division from the opposite North West. Mounted Police Post - I was amused to see the caserly grey horse on hearing the bugle feed call. Prick his ears, and swim across the river, and gallop up to the M. W. M. Police barracks, tail coated up. Well assured he got his portion of oats, every time! I was informed later, that the American bugle feed call is the same as the Canadian call! - I also purchased a gold hunting case watch from the Sitting Bull services, with the inscription of the owners name - This watch we returned to the owners family - I forget the name, but I think it was a Captain Williams of the U.S. Army - however I am not certain - They also had a few American coins -
