Dear Mr. Campbell

I've done the best I could with your Sitting-bull. It's a first review, and unless you are satisfied with it do not use it. Nevertheless I like the book, and compliment you upon the hard work done. Your sympathy is altogether with the Indian. This alone would go far to convince me, even though I have never liked Sitting-bull. I never knew him, never saw him, but having lived nearly half a century with many who did know him I became quite certain of his calibre from them.

Please do not feel that you ought to use my review if you do not like it. I'd much rather you would not let it go if there is anything about it that displeases you. I long ago made up my mind that I'd never review books unless I honestly liked them (though someday I may wish to throw a harpoon--and God knows they sometimes ought to <sup>be</sup> thrown)

Sincerely

Frank B. Linderman
