Dear Mr. Campbell:

I have received your letter and checks, for which I thank you very much.

I am very sorry for the misunderstanding regarding the money. I thought that it was merely an estimation, and as it turned out, some of the articles were much longer than I had estimated and some were shorter. One that I had estimated at 1400 words turned out to be only 500, a mistake on my part that I can't account for. As for the One Bull paper, the reason I can't understand the reference to it is that I put all of the books and pamphlets we had used that afternoon in my desk immediately. The One Bull paper was not among them. For your information I enclose the slip of paper on which I wrote the articles to be copied that afternoon. You may destroy it.

With best wishes for the success of your work, I am

Very truly yours,

Opal Calhoon
