

And I still feel that he could never have gotten close enough to him to recognize the corpse on Custer Battlefield.

In White Bull's calendar for 1875 there are remarks concerning Touch the Cloud's father - Lone Horn - which state that he was a party to the sale of the Black Hills after getting drunk in 1875 and died as a result of that shameful act, BUT - if I am not mistaken - the Hills were not sold until 1876, and Lone Horn had died during the previous year.

Well, I would be pleased to hear from you again and presume you got my previous letter I mailed by ordinary mail, as I thanked you for your information. GUNS magazine I expect soon.

Cordially yours,

Joseph Palmer