

Bear and Strikes-the-Kettle, in the front rank of the ghost followers, fired at the police, mortally wounding Lieutenant Bull Head. Wheeling as he fell Bull Head shot Sitting Bull through the body and Sergeant Red Tomahawk ended the medicine man's career with a bullet through the head.

Excerpt from article written by Luman U. Spehr of the Pioneer Press Staff, and published in the columns of the St. Paul Pioneer Press. It is based on an interview with Major James McLaughlin while he was in St. Paul, Minnesota, in April, 1923.