

the people; and because he was a close friend of Supt. E. D. Mossman; and would probably be sent there for something else, if so we wish to get a copy of what he was ther for."

As for the Interpreter, Mr. Frank Zahn, it has not been my pleasure to know of his attitude toward the Indians of America, though he is given publicity as an authority on Indian tales and traditions.

According to "Bulletin 30, Hand Book of American Indians" by the Bureau of American Ethnology, Part 2, page 584, it is briefly recorded that Sitting Bull, a famous Sioux Chief, was shot and killed by Indian police, Red Tomahawk. This murder of an unarmed man dragged out of bed at night by police, in search of a runaway school boy, made Tomahawk notorious.

Of Sitting Bull, I quote from the same page and authority as follows:

"Although a chief by inheritance, it was rather Sitting Bull's success as an organizer and his later reputation as a sacred dreamer that brought him into prominence."

According to McLaughlin, Inspector of the Inidan Service -
- - his accuracy of judgment, knowledge of men, a student-like disposition to observe natural phenomena, and a deep insight into affairs among Indians and such white people as he came into contact with made his stock in trade
- - - He stood well among his people, and was respected for his generosity, quiet disposition, and steadfast adherence to Indian ideals."
