Red Tomahawk, Killer Of Sitting Bull, Dies

MANDAN (N. D.), Aug. 8.—(AP)—Red Tomahawk, known as the slayer of the famous Sitting Bull, is dead.

He died last night from infirmities of age in a little habitation on the Standing Rock Indian reservation near Cannon Ball—among his people where he had lived for 82 years.

Once a mighty warrior of the great Sioux nation, the aged brave, whose six foot one inch frame resisted knife and bullet wounds, succumbed peacefully, 41 years after another famous member of the Sioux, Sitting Bull, had been slain.

Red Tomahawk was a member of the Hunkpapa-Blackfeet tribe of the Sioux—the snake-like ones—and was a unit of the Indian police when Sitting Bull, medicine man, attempted to inflame the Indians to a final stand against the encroachments of the white man.

Ghost dancing, that weird Indian rite that usually preceded an uprising and banned by the Government, brought an order for the medicine man's arrest, and on December 14, 1890, Maj. James McLaughlin, then Indian agent, detailed a force of Indian police to bring him in. The detail included Red Tomahawk and forty-one others, headed by Lieut. Bull Head and Sergeant Shavehead.

One version of what followed relates that the Indian police engaged in a vicious battle with the band after Sitting Bull resisted arrest. As he fled from his lodge Red Tomahawk shot him down. Meanwhile Bull Head and Shavehead had been slain, leaving Red Tomahawk in command of the remaining Indian police.

But Sitting Bull was not the only one to die in that deadly fight. Spotted Horn Bull, Brave Thunder, Black Bird, Little Assiniboine and Catch-the-Bear—all hostile ghost dancers—also met their death.

Against a hostile camp, Red Tomahawk maintained his position until arrival of Seventh Cavalry troops, who quelled the impending uprising.

Twice in recent years Red Tomahawk had gone to Washington, where he met President Hoover and Vice President Curtis. He was married twice. Surviving are three sons and a daughter.

"Now I can HEAR perfectly."

THERE is no need to shout. Talk naturally. Whisper if you want to. I can hear perfectly again. You didn't notice that tiny object in my ear, did you? Well, that is attached to the most powerful and accurate little featherweight transmitter that modern science has achieved. Here it is, fastened under my coat, and the power is furnished by a battery in my vest pocket. The talkies, the radio and the voices of my friends are brought to my ear clearly, distinctly and without distortion."
