

You say that Four Horns was left for dead on the battle-field. Did his comrades think he was dead? Or were they chased away by the enemy? How was Four Horns hurt? How did it happen that the enemy did not find him and scalp him? I would like to know all about this fight.

yes Four Horns was left for dead on the battle field near the Mussel shell. The Sioux or Tetons then were on Grass Creek (now Crow Res) — It was late ^{in the} ^{AM} when the battle ended the Crows were driven away. Some one made the report that Four Horns died early in the battle, The Sioux had taken the Crow horses and were in haste to drive them away before the Crows brought reinforcements. F. Horns was wounded three places, He was just stunned when he was seen. Then the night he crawled to a Buffalo wallow, he pulled out the arrows out of his wounds, he treated his wounds, he was near a spring ^{water} smelling took place. He got a long willow ~~to~~ to shoot away the voltes when they came too near. It was two months before he was able to travel on foot at that.

You say that Sitting Bull was in this fight. What did he do? Who else was there? Are any of these men alive now?
