

Louisville Ky. Dec. 13. '14.

Dear professor

I certainly would like to write and illustrate the book you mention on Indian costumes etc. but I hardly have the time just now and also some-what doubt whether there would be a sufficient number of people interested in the subject. To make the book really serviceable it ought to be illustrated in colors which would make it very expensive, though there is, of course, a possibility of indicating the colors in black and white. At least one color chart or key would, however be indispensable to convey an idea of just what shades of the different colors are meant. As to your other questions:

My miniature tipis, collected among the Ogala, with two large painted "Sacred" tipis are in the museum of ethnology of the city of Hamburg, Germany.