

This autumn I shall take up etching again, as many of my ideas lend themselves more to black and white representation than to color work.

To decide in every case which idea should be expressed in color and which in black and white is sometimes very difficult to determine.

Many artists, greater than myself, have erred in this matter and have thus lost many a good picture idea.

Did you see the new book by Doctor Clark Wissler of the Mus. of Nat. Hist. in New York? It seems to be a highly scientific discussion of the Red Race in America. I shall try to get it for the local library.

Hoping to hear from you soon
I remain

yours

Frederick Weingold