Louisville, Kentucky

Dear Weygold:

I have just received a statement of the royalties on our book from Lyons and Carnahan. The book seems to keep on selling but the royalties are pitifully small. I have complained about this. If you should do the same without letting them suspect that we are in communication on the matter it might encourage them to be a little more generous next time.

I have just completed the manuscript of a book in which Sitting Bull's nephew, White Bull, narrates the stories of the fights of the Minniconjou and Hunkpapa Sioux of which he has first hand knowledge, 1862 to 1876. It will include accounts of the Fetterman fight and the only Indian account extant of the Wagon Box fight. Houghton Mifflin will bring it out in the spring I believe. Salaries have been cut to such an extent that I lean more and more on my writing. I should be glad to hear from you again.

Yours cordially,

W. L. Campbell.
