It interested me greatly to read of your literary venture. It would indeed interest me very much to illustrate the book you are preparing.

As far as I can gather from your remarks, the illustrations for this book would have to be of a more realistic nature than for instance those I made for Eastman's Ind. Boyhood, which I viewed as a rather idealized glorification of Ind. life.

It would therefore be of importance for me to know what tribe or tribes come principally into question in your book. I am not very familiar with the Southern plains tribes and have
