Shields for chapter initials. What do you think of it?

I don't just see that Chapter 6 begins with "T". This would place a capital D on the shield & at the beginning of the text, necessarily some distance away, a solitary "t" which would look extremely awkward. If you like the shield idea for initials, it would be very desirable to begin every chapter with a word of at least three letters. Please give your opinion on this. Also on the equipment of the two figures in the tail-piece. You doubtless have seen shields with red stranding pendants decorated with feathers as here portrayed (twice: Thunderbird over star).

For tailpieces I have to economize particularly in space. The figures will appear very small, perhaps less than 1/4 of the original, therefore not much detail can be shown.

The coat of mail is <sup>drawn well</sup> as good as I can remember the specimens I saw in Europe many years ago, with scalloped edges on sleeves & bottom.

Will the address of Shirlwind do?

I received the photo with the rearing horse, but have not found the eagle group. are you sure you put it in?
