

the following pictograph accompanying several figures of Dakota warriors:  or  Evidently these figures represent human heads. The second figure is not to be confused with the figure for "captured horse":  which refers, of course, to the foot print of a horse's hoof and is also common on the buffalo robes.

If you really want the whole book of Friderici translated - there are 137 pages - I shall be glad to send it to you.

By the way, there is a book on the Sioux by an agent of the Standing Rock reservation, I think Mc Laughlin was his name, who knew Sitting Bull. S. B. also appeared several times before the Senate of the U. S. in Washington and delivered speeches which are doubtless recorded in the Congressional Record. Frederic J. Haskin, Director of the Information Bureau Washington, D. C. offers to answer any question. But only for readers of papers who subscribe to that service. If you have no such paper in Norman, let me know, and I shall try him for any question you may have (as, for instance, where those speeches of S. B. can be found) .

I shall be very much interested to see a copy of your book on S. B. when it appears in print. I hope you will have good luck with it.

Cordially yours

I send the translation of Friderici's book ~~under separate cover.~~ enclosed. This (partial) translation appeared in :

"Annual Report Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution for the year ending June 30, 1906, Washington 1907.

I have no information on the Indian brother-friend relation whatsoever.

Frederick Weygand