

7) The whole place was eloquent of thriftlessness, ignorance and sloth-yet Bud had pride. This rested upon his skill as a huntsman and fisherman. His ~~game~~^{grounds} were as many as the charges of the moon they layed and better eared for than his children. By their help in a country which still abounded in small game Bud supplied the family larder: ~~Game is well~~

H ~~is~~ now game is a good diet, But it does not line the pockets of the hunters with silver in a land where it is plentiful - and silver is necessary for clothes and ammunition and flour and sugar & whisky -
