The little crippled Indian girl is Miss Audrey Morrisette of Kyle, South Dakota. It never occurred to me to suggest to the judges that she be given a little special award. There were so many things to look after that it escaped my attention. She came to me after the parade up on the grounds and asked if she could enter. She had no costume at that time. I took her over and put her in the middle of the group because it seemed to me that she had a great deal of courage and she was very nice. I am glad you mentioned her in your letter because I also wish to write to her.

I am attaching hereto the names and the addresses of the other four judges. Our present plans are to produce this show again next year and to run it three nights and two days. We, fortunately, were able to meet all of our expenses this year and have a little left over but there is a very practical plan for underwriting the entire program next year, so that we are now assured that we can make it an annual event. We have an Indian committee now that we can really depend upon, and, I believe, that now we can know a lot of the rough corners off. We hope you will back with us again next year, and appreciate any suggestions you may have to offer.

Again our deepest appreciation to you for complimenting us by coming. With every kind wish, I am

Yours sincerely,
