here and there a log cacin put up in good style, with fireplaces and chimneys. They received their goods, 31,49654 in value, and seemed to be well sabisfode They are a kind-hearted and good people, and the person and property of the white man is secure with them. They also have many complaints to make of the Sioux, and asked protection, as they spend their time in tilling the soil, producing corn, pumpkins, and beans in quite an abundance, and have neither tine nor inclination to pursue the war-trail. They complain that they cannot venture out to procure meat without being pursued by this foe; that heretofore they have made a Visit about the time their crops were ripe, and have carried off the most of it: They reauest that troops be sent to protect them, and to drive the sioux back to their own country. They try to live up to their treaty requirements, deside 195 to cultivate firiendy relations with the govermment, / would make any treaty arrangments that night be asked of the. They request that assistance be civen them in building houses and fences, ploughing of grounds, schools, sc. They number about 1,000 souls.

I would here recommend that the department appropriate $$ 1,000$, to be expended in Dreaking prairie for the Arickarees, Gros Ventres, and Mandans the next season, and 600 as compensation for a practicul western farmer, to conduct the farm and instruct the Indians in agriculture. This expense for five years, and I will warrant that these people will conduct it thereafter in the most successful manner. It is only necessary to break large patches of prairie for these people, (who live some three miles apart, ) and dituide it in quantities suitable to each family; give them proper seeds, the potato above above everything else; encourage and instruct them; add to these fields each year, and in five years they would be a shining light to the roving bands of their fellow-men. This is due to these people, since they are, of all the Indians on the Missouri river to the Hocky mountTains, the only ones that have tried to cultivate the soilaunaided by the govermment.
