

the 16th Inf. Surgeon DeLoffe, A.A. Surg Chase and Steward W.D. Freeman form the medical staff, while Comy Sergt Fred A. McNeill Presides with characteristic grace and dignity over the commissary department. The Post trader's store under the control of Neil W. Evans & Co. is well managed, and prices are very reasonable except in the hardware department, where 'brain muddlers' are dispensed at 25¢ each. Mr. Evans is assisted by an excellent clerical force, consisting of Messrs. Cleveland, Juvenal and Decker in the store and Mess. Fera and Wilson in the mail room.

The First Sergeants at the Post, a very important feature by the way in army organization, especially to enlisted men, are T.B. Gatewood and Jao F. Fahy of H and G of Cav and Z. Reldel and J. Drewry of I and E of the Infantry respectively.

The post is shortly to be honored by a visit from Generals Sheridan, Pope and Crook, with members of their staff. They intend to go on a hunt from here towards Camp Supply.

Col. Fred Grant of Sheridan's staff has been here for some days as the guest of Col. Mizner. He is looking well, and is quite a favorite with the boys, some of the old hands especially, having pleasant reminiscences of Fred when he was with them in days gone by, on detached service he being an officer of the 4th.

Yours, timidly,

MRS. FIDGET.

P.S. - I must confess that for some of the facts contained in the above I am indebted to Fidget especially about that odious sample room. He goes there altogether too often, and when I remonstrate he only says, well, Mrs. F. a man must irrigate occasionally. How horrid these men are. MRS. F.
