WIDOW OF LATE JUDGE IS DEAD AFTER ILLNESS

Mrs. I. C. Parker, Former Fort Smith Social Leader, Succumbs at Home of Son in Durant, Okla.

NATIVE OF ST. JOSEPH

Funeral Services Probably Will Be Held From Church of Immaculate Conception

Mrs. Mary O'Toole Parker, widow of the late Judge Isaac C. Parker, famous jurist in the Western Arkansas district for 25 years died Wednesday night about 7 o'clock at her home in Durant, Okla., according to announcement received in Fort Smith by Mrs. James Parker, 1402 Dodson avenue, a daughter-in-law.

The body will arrive in Fort Smith, Thursday afternoon at 6 o'clock, over the Frisco railroad for funera-services and burial here, Friday.
No definite arrangements had been made late Wednesday night for burial, relatives said, but it is expected that the funeral will be held from the Church of Immaculate Conception with Dr. Patrick F.
Horan officiating. Burial will be made in the National cemetery, beside the grave of her husband.

Mrs. Parker was Miss Mary O'Toole. She was born in St.
Joseph, Mo., July 22, 1839, the daughter of James B. O'Toole, and her mother was Sophia Hickman of Columbus, Mo. After graduation from the Convent of Sacred Heart in St. Joseph, she married the then Congressman Parker.

Move to Fort Smith

After a number of years of residence in Washington, D. C., the Parkers moved to Fort Smith. Mr.
Parker had been appointed as jurist of the federal court in Fort Smith.
Here she won instant recognition, and was a leader in society circles for a number of years.

The now prominent Fortnightly club owes its birth to Mrs. Parker, and a number of other social activities were sponsored by her. Following the sudden death of her husband November 17, 1896 and the destruction of her home by the cyclone a year later, Mrs. Parker left Fort Smith and made her home in Durant with her son, Charles Parker. There also she was a leader, and a number of societies were organized during her lifetime.

Mrs. Parker is survived by a number of grandchildren and nieces, her second son having died in Durant last spring. Relatives in Fort Smith include Mrs. James Parker, her daughter-in-law; and grandchildren, Bailey Parker, Mrs. James Clendenning Jr., Miss Lillie Parker, I. C.
Parker and James Parker. There also are a number of nieces in Washington, D. C. and Los Angeles, relatives said.

Judge Native of Iowa

Judge Isaac Charles Parker, a native of Iowa, came with his family from St. Joseph, Mo., in March 1875, under appointment of President U. S. Grant, as judge of the federal district court for the western district of Arkansas, with criminal jurisdiction over the Indian Territory.

This was at the time, the largest judicial territory under one court in the United States and embraced 70,000 square miles with practically no railroad or telegraph conveniences.

Prior to coming to Fort Smith, Judge Parker had been city attorney of St. Joseph, county attorney of Buchanan county, Mo., a member of congress from that district and refused the place of supreme judge of Utah at the request of President Grant, to accept the appointment at Fort Smith.

Judge Parker served at Fort Smith until his death in November 17, 1896, and during that time became perhaps the best known of all federal judges in the nation because of his determination to rid the Indian Territory of banditry.

Shortly after his death, criminal jurisdiction over the territory was taken away from the court here and vested in the newly established court at Muskogee.
