Wilma:

In this picture: Floyd Hathcoat, me, Amanda Summerfield, and Amy on your lap. The girls belong to my son Larry who took the picture. My oldest son, Wesley Jr., bought a book for his daughter Lori who is in college at Davis and studies Native Americans. (She spent one semester in a Mexico college. She speaks Spanish fluently.)

I sure enjoyed your book. My son Larry called to see how far along I was in reading it, and I told him I had finished. He grumbled because he was only half way through (But he works out yet.)

I have talked about writing a book since I retired. But something always goes wrong. Now I am inspired by your book. I am cleaning out a special room to be my writing room. I will dwell more on Oklahoma life in general than on Cherokee history.

Sincerely yours,

Maxine Eden

*(I write under.)

My sons were really proud to meet you. They have built a cabin for me high in the Trinity Alps (called Lake Mountain) in California.
