

at Wewoka to loyal Seminoles by John Brown and Jackson Brown, president and secretary of the Wewoka Trading company. John Brown is the present chief of the Seminoles. The payment was not made from an approved roll. The government is trying to determine if the Browns did not pay a lot of money to Indians who were not entitled to it, and if the Wewoka Trading company did not benefit by the payment to these Indians. If it can be shown that the money was paid to the wrong persons a demand will be made upon the persons responsible and they will have to replace it with the government to the credit of the Indians.
