

their own interests under their treaties and the intercourse law, -- they could not, they dared not do more, they are prejudged, and their motives impugned. Their intention, which in any other people would be considered a laudable one, is falsified, and then turned against them to cover and forward the design of the strong to rob the weak.