December 21, 1936.

Dear Judge:

With thoughts of Christmas, I am thinking of you and was about to send you a card with holiday greetings. Instead, I propose a toast:-

"To the lawyers I have known --
They are a brave and hardy crew.
They are loyal to their trusts.
They fight to the very end, but off the battlefield they clasp my hand anew.
They give their word and make it good.
They help me when I need help,
and so to every man
They are the friends who count.
I'll always cling to my lawyer friends."

To you, my friend, I want to say (just this once, perhaps never again, though I'll be thinking it year after year), "knowing you has made life worth more to me than had you and I never met, and I'll crave your friendship always".

Wishing you health, happiness, contentment, and as much prosperity as can come to a lawyer, I am

Sincerely yours,
