To My Dear Amo Cutlip

Your sorrow is like rosemary and rue....

I cannot tell how much I grieve with you,
But though I have no words at my command,
Remember this: I know, and understand!

On the eve of our departure for the southland comes the sad news of your bereavement.....It is impossible for me to adequately express to you my distress upon reading the death notices.....

It seems Judge Cutlip was loved and admired far and near for his fine qualities---- therefore you will have fondest memories to mitigate your sorrow.....

Time, is the only anodyne for your grief.....

A little girl came from a neighbor's house where her playmate had died. "Why did you go?" questioned her father. "To comfort the mother," said the child. "What could you do to comfort her?" "I climbed up into her lap and cried with her."

Dear friend, I, too, can weep with you, and I do.

Yours in loving sympathy,

(Mrs.P.P.)

Dear Mrs. Cutlip:---

You have my deepest sympathy in your sorrow, you know. Indeed, in a measure, I share your grief, for Guy was a very dear friend for many years. My association with him was ever pleasant and interesting. It was ever a joy to visit him and you in Wewoka, and your occasional visits here are pleasant memories that hurt a little as they are stirred by the pain of his passing.

Perhaps words aren't of much use when the shock of parting is so keen, but a friend who can do little can do no less than try. Then it is some consolation to recall that he lived a full and rather happy life; a useful life, too, and successful, and the sort that made so many more friends than enemies. In the main, I should say, Guy made friends of those who met and knew him well. I know that my affection for him grew with the years and better acquaintance that ~~met~~^{meant} fuller appreciation. And you, Amo, share that friendship for all your kindness to me as well as to him. I do grieve with you and hope some word of mine may prove a little comforting.

In the midst of a busy newspaper week, I may not get away for his funeral, but my heart and sympathy will be there. His death was a shock to me, even after you had written of his serious illness. Somehow I couldn't realize that pleasant voice was stilled. From other sad experiences I know that time heals, and that the pleasant memories outlast the painful present. For you I wish the strength to bear so hard a blow.

Sincerely your friend,

Walt W. Mills

My dear Mrs. Cutlip:

Words are useless at a time like this. I do want, however, to express my deep regret at the passing of your noble husband. While I never did have the privilege of knowing him, I feel I know him through the many splendid tributes that have been paid him by his friends. I shall always think of him as a great friend of every one and as one of the authorities on the history of the Seminole people. I treasure the pleasant relationships I have had with you as his lovely wife and as president of a noble organization of women.

Yours very sincerely,

Secretary

Dear Amo -

I've just heard the word - I'm so sorry.

As hard as our partings are, we know they are but an interlude until we meet again. And when the final curtain is being drawn on our mortal being - our good deeds live after us - We know that the Judge's eye was an exemplification of loyalties and upstanding Christian principles. His name was never mentioned, but men spoke of him with respect and affection. He has left to you and yours a heritage of honorable service.

Even in our darkest hours we have the comfort of our Saviour - "For as I am with you always." And it is manifest to us day by day, even in the rising and setting of the sun.

Be brave, my dear, in the knowledge that God's will be done. We are his children and his ever father - a kindly loving father.

If you help - Call me. I'll help.

Love
Evelyn

Dear Mrs. Cutlip:

My deepest sympathy to you and yours in the loss of your loved one.

May God bless and hour.

Dear Amos,

Agnew did not hear until too late last night for me to send you a note before this morning.

I feel so sorry, Amos - I had so hoped this wouldn't happen - at least not for years and years.

You were so much help to me when mother left, and I have not forgotten.

I wanted so much to come out there to see you this morning, but Agnew says it is not to be considered. I have gotten one of those abominable chest colds again, and feel horrid. Bab and Tom are also home from school and in bed with the same thing.

So please forgive me for not getting out there, and

please, know, Amos, that I feel deeply for you, and love you dearly.
