In this day of transition we have repudiated thrift and turned to loose spending. We have discarded judgment and substituted sentiment -

Hung our pictures in the palaces of the great our ports have been recognized by the finest publications of the land

We have given to the world one of the most exhaustive biographies ever written - The Raven -

It would be unjust and discriminating to refer by name to any one or more of our statesmen who have received high acclaim in the nation and the state.
But their accomplishments have been great and their abilities recognized.

Our railroads and fine highways reach and accommodate every portion of the <sup>state</sup> Commonwealth carrying our products the demands of other states - our fathers did not think it disgraceful to be useful - they worked.
