

But so many Indian people nowadays don't rely, understand the meaning of the sanitation program. Some take interest in it and some don't. It's hard to make them understand what I'm there for. Governor James and all other Indian officials have explained to these people what I am there for. He has told them all that we could have a meeting at any time whenever he saw Abe Ned coming, and knock on your door don't turn him down, bring him in. He has something good to offer you in the way of sanitation. And speaking of good health, you know the Indian people have a lot of problems with that, oh, what I might say, of being sick. But more seriously speaking, I do believe we have more ailments to be cured in most of them that need to be cured by a clinic and hospitals we have nowadays. With each of us assuming the role of medicine man and recognizing the ailment with our race and with which we can treat (we are sick physical. We have ailment caused by the lack of opportunity, the education and leadership and employment. Daily, I meet and talk with individuals who publicly profess an interest with Indians. Usually this interest stems from being an Indian, and those making a profession of being white. They are the every local attested to the mistreatment of the Indian race, so they say, everywhere I go. That question comes up about how the white people have treated the Indians. Sometimes it's hard to make the Indian people--the full blood understand the condition that we are in at the present time. There are some that gets mad and fly off the handle. Still I have to stay with them in order to get--to try to explain everything to them, so they won't feel, so they won't have any hard feelings toward the white people. Of course, I have a lot of difficulties to make them understand, usually, this interest stems from me being an Indian and those making a profession being white. In the next breath they have reached a conclusion to educate the Indian into the white man's world and all his problem would be solved. Of course, all of these things have been solved
