

(No sir, there just as solid as they can be.)

They're good.

(That's a big thing, too, one, two three--)

Three story' high, 30 by 40.

(Yes sir.)

And I'm fourth generation--my grandad and my great-grandad are buried up yonder, on a farm right out in there.

(Yes sir.)

My great-grandad was around in here over 150 years ago.

(Well, 150 years ago.)

Little over 150 years ago.

(What was your great-grandaddy's name?)

His name was Aaron Beck.

(Aaron Beck?)

And my dad's name was Tony Beck.

Mrs. Beck: Aaron Beck was called Ed Beck, wasn't he?

They called him Tom Ed Beck. He's on the Cherokee Nation roll as Aaron Beck.

(Now the original Flint town over across the creek, is that right?)

I'm trying to think of something. There's an old woman that died. I was going to ask her some help. Yeah, that's that, that was that store, I told you over there, at the beginning--

Mrs. Beck: I expect Roy knows more about that than Kermit does.

Well, I know some. I know about what I told you that Estelle Jackson used to have that.

(Yeah.)

And then there's an old man that used to own it and Maude knows of another one that was in there, that owned it, and she's got some history on that post office if you want to get that.

(Yes, I'm very interested in that--)
