

(Little Spring. I bet that thing has gotten up in it's time, hasn't it?)

Boy howdy! One morning I was standing in the back door and I heard a road and it hadn't rained right there, but it's head's up around Oak and them big old logs and trees coming down there. My sister stayed all night there and she said when we first--before we ever built a new store building and we were standing in the back door and I said, "Sister,"--her name was Myrtle--I said, "Listen to that noise, now what is that?" Sounded like a tornado, thundering and lightening, and we looked and that water had come just rushing in like that.

(My goodness!)

Oh, it was coming down--

(Scare you to death.)

Well, it had got almost up around that man's store there. Boy, that thing hit and like it meant business. And that foot-bridge went out. We miss that little bridge too.

(I bet it does. Well, they built right there pretty close to--)

(Just down below there.)

Kept off the water.

(Well.)

Off of the bed, there wasn't no water down here, only just at times. And you know that thing went out just like Lottie's eye.

(Well.)

I seen it go out. I heard it, when it was backing up and everything. The logs was knocking. And I went down there from the store and seen the water.. I think that was what washed that bridge out. Well, you got somebody to talk to you, didn't you.

EARLY DAY ACTIVITIES AND PEOPLE

(Well, I bet you there's been a lot of things happen in that little old part
