

there and found it like a house that is locked, it was closed. So they pull on it and pull on it and opened it. And there was in that tipi a little old lady laying there, so they call her and talk to her. So she says, "Oh, come in children." And they went in and she had a bucket of water and something to eat there. When she eat that up why I don't know what's gonna happen. Well, anyway they went in there and fixed her up got her fresh water and went to the camp and got her meat. Took her out and had her walking. And she told them they had left her there to die. Thats the way the Indian are, when they are on the move, way up there in the prairie somewhere before the white man got them, they were always alert. They just leave a old person like that and they just die anywhere. Today the white man don't see them--the white man I have seen, they put their old people in the rest home, forget 'em and don't see them, I don't know. That's what I saw one day. I went to visit a rest home and this old lady said, "My folks put me here and Never did come to see me, I don't know where they went." That wasn't any better than what my mother told me. Oh we are not any better than each other. And the white man always says of course its always the Indian thats drunk, they thiefs, and all that. God created men equal, everybody has all that. Every race has a thief, a murderer or what-not. So there we are, they just put it down on somebody they think is lower than they are. But I know a lot of white people and colored people that has hearts of golad. Very nice people I know. So today is today and we are trying to live together. And I am very proud of people who are struggling, trying to live the way God want us to live. He has created us, this way and that way. Many, many years ago my people says they was here. Some where in a book I read, somebody wrote we came from Asia. But my people say they never know where they come from, but they was here when they find out we was round here in the United States. So I always think and think, to live with people whatever they are. We are trying to be God's people. That I am trying to be. I don't know God is great has created hhis world, and ever since it's been created, theres war somewhere, on the face of the earth. Today there is a war going on. It is as well, there is something, everyting has a reason so we just
