

(Marlin?)

Marlin(?) died, you know, then Keeler took it over.

(Un-huh)

'Course they was appointed up yonder.

(Well, what kind of--well maybe you'd rather not answer this but as a curious by-stander, what kind of a chief do you think that Chief Keeler has made? If you'd rather not answer it that's all right.)

Well.

(Could go back to the original statement, "there's room for improvement".

I don't want to put you on the spot.) (Laughter)

Yes.

HAS WORKED HARD - JOBS IN EARLY DAYS

(Mr. Guess, I was going to ask you to, what kind of jobs have you worked at here during your life in Oklahoma? Or have you had to go out of state at certain times for jobs?)

Well, I just picked up jobs first one place and another and I didn't have no steady job in my life. On, that is, one at a time. Just a little bit at a time. That's all.

(Just here and there?)

Just here and over yonder and first one place and another. Used to work the railroad. That's pretty hard work. Used to work in timber quite a bit. That's rough work too. And I used to work these roads quite a bit--construction job.

(Un-hum)

But didn't work very long at a time.

(Uh-hum--When the dust-bowl, when they called Oklahoma the Dust Bowl--it was so hard hit by drought? You all lived here then, didn't you? How was times
