

(Un-huh)

You know there's a lot of people that needs help.

(You mean like just individual Cherokee people?)

Yeah, lots of Cherokees, yeah. Yeah, Cherokee people needs help, I've seen the places where they needed it. Some of them can't speak English or do any thing.

(Uh-huh, you mean sometimes they need help with the little things?)

Yes, and some of them, quite a bit--lots of things too. Some places. A lot of these people can't speak English yet.

(Un-huh)

We have those that couldn't speak English at their home.

(Uh-huh)

Quite a few of them. More of the children speak English but they can't interpret--that's the small trouble there, see?

(Un-huh)

They talk good English but they can't interpret it to us. That makes it mean too. You see.

(So there's a generation gap there, isn't there?)

That's right.

(So they're still experiencing problems that actually goes back to the language barrier.)

They still have problems right there in their little home. Kids that talks good English but they can't interpret it--can't help the old folks. That's the way it is, lots of places.

(Un-huh, well do you have any idea what would help solve that?)

Well, this what would help, if they'd just practice.

(The older ones or the younger ones?)
