

I don't see how I could give it up.

(Well, it looks like that nowadays. You wouldn't--there is something; you know, people that are eligible to get in your organization. It seems like they ought to, but they don't. Seem like they kind of reluctant to come and ask to join your club and more or less let you do the first overture to asking them to be a member, you know, and it seems like to me, that you might overlook some of them as you go along.)

We ask them, but they don't come. So, we don't ask them anymore. Just let them go. If they want to, they got chance.

(It is like when you have these dances every year, it seems like your dances are getting better and better as you go along though. I didn't get to attend your last one, but the others all seem like they always had a pretty good turn out.)

See, what we have to pay our dues, last part of October, and all the members know they going to have to pay. That's the reason why we call meeting and ask them to come and bring their dues, that have to be sent in. And they get the card and things but if they can't come they could just send it. They won't do it.

(But you did have enough for a chapter this year?)

Huh?

(You do have enough for a chapter this year?)

Yes.

(Oh.)

We got--I think we got ten or eleven. That is where they--Bess said she didn't pay her dues 'till she came and dues are already sent in, but they are already gone, gone to Washington, D.C. And here she come, her and she said, "Here are my dues." It just takes extra paper. Have to write five copies
