

Jean said, "Next time we have it, use the armory, Mama," she says, "I am going to make you some big signs, and kids is going to read it, Stop Stay Away." They got up there on that, that what's his name?

(Dave.)

Lewis Hale, he had some things up there they had painted, and he didn't want kids to get up there. But he should put sign up there. He just told us that, "Kids just up there all over on them." I said the next time we could make some big signs and when they don't want kids put around things and they could read. But that's good place down there.

(Yes, this is it.)

It's about over.

(Well, that in closing this interview. I'd just like to comment that this is a mighty fine organization and hope that you carry on many more years, and seems like anything worthwhile having. It is pretty hard to operate or get, and I guess that is the way you have to look at this. Anything worth having is worth struggling for.)

Yes.

(You come by things easily, well, seems like you don't care for it as well as something you come by the hard way.)

Yes, we work for it in hard way too, you know. We worked harder and harder to organize. It wasn't easy. And it is not easy yet, but if we all get together and cooperate to get it, it won't be so bad. That is what we need is cooperation.

(So, it seems like in every organization that is in existence, it has its-- you might say its hardships. And seem like we gonna cease to exist, you might say. And it seems like that all the right time at the right place is always
