

Lewis's motion, seven to five. (Seminole language for about 1 minute)

Unidentified man: O.K. The next motion, the main thing. (Seminole)

Unidentified man: Nomination"

Unidentified man: Do I have to bring that we just amended see--

Unidentified man: Oh. (Seminole language spoken for about 2 minutes by different men.)

Unidentified man: Mr. Chairman, I make a motion that the nomination cease and we elect by acclimation. (Different people talking in between this conversation and questions being asked that are not understood.) Yeow, you got to elect all of them. All seven of them.

Virgil Harrington: I know, but these are nominees, not elected. These are nominees, they are not elected--(Some Seminole conversation with other people talking in background.) I see what you mean.

(Seminole language for about 3 minutes and different people are talking and asking questions in background.)

(Lewis Harjo moved that three nominees be elected. Charlie Brown seconded his motion and the three who have been nominated have been elected. Three of the seven--)

Virgil Harrington: One at a time.

(Correction.) (There is much conversation in background. Some in Seminole and other in English.)

(Lewis T. Johns. Three nominated so far, Terry Walker, Louis Harjo, John Larney.)

(Talking in Seminole and English at same time for about 2 minutes.)

(Correction.)

(More Seminole conversation and background interruptions. This is talk about nominations, and men who are nominated and elected. About 3 minutes.)

Unidentified man: Well, you vote for every one of 'em don't you? I thought you vote for--

(Of the three nominees, the voted and to see who would be elected and Terry
