

EMPLOYMENT PROBLEMS.

Course these old ones they won't hire you after you get up to about forty no way. You can't work much.

(Uh-huh)

On public jobs, stuff like that.

(So you say employment to keep the young people in the state.)

Yeah, I think so.

(So the children won't have to go off somewhere.)

I believe it would.

(Cause you have a daughter in college?)

Yeah, she's. I don't know this makes about the second or third semester I guess. She's got a long ways to go yet before she gets her teaching license.

(She's going to be a teacher?)

Yeah, that's what she said.

(Well that good. You'd like to be able to see the young people stay here instead of having to go off somewhere.)

Yeah, looks like it would be the best. This war has taken a lot of them off too you know.

(Young men?)

Yeah.

(The Vietnam War?)

Uh-huh. Yeah I seen the paper just the other day--there--several of the boys allowed to go for their examinations you know.

(Well just one more thing before we sign off here. What do you think of that Arkansas River project coming through here? Is' that going to help out any? What's it going to do you think?)
