

very well or-- I don't know too much about it, (I've read about it.)

Well, that's about all I know too is just what I've read. I know that two communities have these houses. And I've been to some of these houses that have been built and they seem to be pretty good. I don't know what deal they made with, you know, the housing authority.

(Somebody was telling me that if you pay seven dollars a month.)

If you don't have a steady income you know, someone who doesn't have a steady income, a steady job all the time, well you pay nine dollars a month.

(Un-huh)

Is my understanding. And if you work all the time--you don't have income coming in all the time way the highest you pay is twenty-two dollars a month.

(Not clear)

No, it isn't. And the houses seem to be pretty good.

(People seem to be pretty well pleased with them?)

The ones that I've seen are.

(Un-humnn--Well, that's probably a dent in the problem anyway.)

Well, that's about all it could be, yeah, a dent.

(It's probably took so long for anything to--)

Well, there's some people that are against that, I don't know why. Maybe they know something that the other people don't know. But if they do they might want to make it public so we'd all know. But the ones that I've seen and talked to seem to be pretty well satisfied with what they've got.

(Well, so you think the housing, and education, and possibly their health?)

Un-humnn.

(How is the Health facilities around here. Do you go to Hastings?)

I go to Hastings. Un-huh. They've always been pretty good to me. But I've heard a lot of people complain. I don't know why. They've always been pretty
