

good to me, you know and my family.

(Is it the older people complain most?)

Some of the younger ones too.

(Like slow service and having to wait so long?)

Well, you've got to expect that. There's so many of them and not enough Doctors, I don't think.

(Well, I know for myself actually if you pay for a medical bill now sometimes you still have to wait. You know, a couple of hours-- or three hours.)

Yes, I've gone to Doctors in town and I've still had to wait. I guess maybe some people think as long as you pay, you don't have to wait, but you do so.

PROBABLE REASONS FOR FEW INDIAN DOCTORS AND LAWYERS

(That brings me to another point. Why don't we have more Indian Doctors and more Indian lawyers and professional people?)

Well, I don't know just how to answer that. It may be because they don't have the money to go to College that long. And I don't know if the Bureau will loan, you know, money for that long of period of time.

(That sorta brings in another problem--the high drop-out rate among the Indian children when they reach sixteen. Could you throw a little light on that problem? That seems to be one of our big problems today and everybody seems to have their own theory on it.)

Well, I'll just tell you what I know about the situation at home. We've had quite a few drop-outs down there. 'Course they're, you know, they're probably about in their 20's now.

(Un-huh)

But their parents weren't able to send them to school in town. They had to pay, you know for this and that and they didn't want to send them a way to boarding school either I guess. And in a lot of cases too, the boys will get
