

I said who was that Cherokee that discovered America?

(I think Indians discovered America, didn't they?) (Laughter)

Calvin just laughed and I said yes, why don't you ask them who the Indian was that discovered America? Yes-- Cherokee is a foreign language. (laughter)

(Well I think that would be good if they could get going on that. I heard they had something on that down here at Kentucky school. A little pilot project. Have you heard anything about that?)

No, I haven't heard anything about that.

(It was sort of an experiment. They started out real small this year but they were teaching lessons in Cherokee and English, like fairy tales and they were involving the parents. I spoke to one of the teachers that works down there and she said it was going real well. But I didn't have time to find out all the details and they were worried about being refunded. I thought maybe you all might know something about it.)

No, I haven't heard anything about it. I don't know if anybody else has.

LACK OF TRANSPORTATION HINDERS EMPLOYMENT

(Well--- Employment? Like now your husband's unemployment because he couldn't get a job around his home or in this area. Do you find that that has been one of the problems?)

Yeah.

(One of your all's problems?)

Yeah, cause living out in the country like we do and like most Indians do and like most Indians do. I think they have a problem of transportation, you know to the place to where they can find a job. Well my husband doesn't have transportation problems but the kind of work that he does, he usually has to go into Arkansas to get a job.

(Un-hum.)
