

(Hummmmmmm, who told them that?)

Well I don't know. They might have made some arrangement with the school because they didn't want the tavern owners selling liquor to the Indian kids going to school.

(Oh, to the young people going to school there.)

But as far as I know there weren't too many Indians living in Lawrence anyway.

(Un-huh)

At that time.

(They probably didn't want them coming into class with hang-overs, huh?)

They probably didn't want this place that I'm talking about is in Topeka, Kansas That was after I was getting out of school and was, I was working.

(So they didn't have a school there?)

No. I was on my way between the place where I worked and going to Haskell, you know to visit and we just happen to stop off there--me and a boy and another couple and just saw that sign up there. Course the others weren't Indians. I was the only Indian with them, I didn't drink anyway so I didn't care whether they served me or not but they just said not serving Indians or Mexicans.

(Humnnn--)

That's the only place that I know of that wouldn't serve Indians.

(You've never noticed here in Oklahoma at all?)

No. I haven't .

(Any discrimination like that?)

No. I think Indians, you know, would be better off even if they wouldn't get liquor to drink. But you know in a Cafe, I think that would be different.

(You mean where they were serving food?)

Yeah. I've not ever been into one, you know, that wouldn't serve me.
