

(No sir, no one lives there anymore.)

Uh-huh. Now this here Kirk, he lives right down there. And (word not clear) the graveyard is right up here on the hill.

(Yeah.)

Don't know whether this road goes by there or not. Well, let's see. I don't much believe he'd be home.

(Nobody home there, don't look like.)

His wife's a school teacher. She might--I don't know where she's teaching at..

(How far up there is it?)

It's just right up on the hill.

(Well, we'll just see if we can drive up there a little ways.)

(Word not clear) out that a way, somewhere.

(Yeah. Yes sir, that is an old time place there.)

No one lives there.

(I imagine there were pretty places in here long time ago when people lived here. Nice barns.)

Yeah, just went slack.

(Just went down. But so many places they just let them go down.)

(World not clear). There was two, three of these boys, Morris boys--

(Yeah.)

Got their graveyard up there so--I don't know, well let's see, we can both go--get that far over there. That can help us. Yeah, see if we can get through here, if you don't pick up a nail now. (attempting to drive through tall grass.)

(Well, lots of grass, mash it down.)

This here gate might be open, the other one ain't open. (sentence not clear.)

That might be as close as we can get. Now the old road used to be over
