

(Yeah, they do.)

I've seen them about half changed.

(There must have been a lot of people lived in Washington Community at one time, long Dog Creek there.)

There were quite a few. Oh not too many either. (sentence not clear)

(Well, was there lots of farming up in there around that country at one time?)

Never did too much farming, just patches. Everybody had a patch, raised a little corn. That's about all they did.

(All of them had gardens, I guess?)

Oh yeah, they all had gardens.

(You know I've often wondered what people did for a living that lived in a woody country like this.)

Years ago they just kind of hunted--raised a little patch of corn.

(Yeah, fished a little bit.

Fished.

SORGHUM MILLS - SAW MILLS

(Did you ever have a sorghum mill up in there?)

Oh, there've been several around the country here.

(Well.)

There've been lot of sorghum mills. Used to be one right up here.

(Yeah. Well, I guess they had a saw mill too, at one time somewhere?)

They've got a sawmill right up there now.

(Yeah. 'Course back in those early days you can remember when tere was lots of good timber in here?)

Oh yeah, used to have good timber. (Name not clear) had a sawmill down here on the creek.

(Yeah,)
