

my daughter made before she passed away.

(Yeah.)

But, I don't hardly ever use it. I just keep in, course it's her sewing, you know.

(Surely.)

(interruption)

(Every now and then someone will show me a keepsake that their grandparents or their mother and daddy had passed on to them. Well, it's wonderful how those things are preserved.)

Yes.

(What good condition they're in.)

(interruption)

I still look at it once in a while.

(That pole axe was your grandfather's then. And that's in good condition yet.)

Yes.

(It sure is. No, sir it's wonderful how they can keep those things so long.)

It's a homemade (words not clear). I guess the other (words not clear).

(Well, that sure is nice. No, it's no telling how old that one is. It's over a hundred years old.)

Yeah, it may be. I got a chair too, when he (words not clear). It's got a buckskin bottom, you know.

(Well.)

Got a deerhide (word not clear) you know.

(Yeah. A chair with a buckskin bottom)

It's that deer hide (words not clear).

(Yeah.)
