

I think as far as the Shawnees are concerned. It doesn't amount to any money but, we took out actually all the that money that was involved. Not long ago I had some papers in the office and they showed us that there was still a small joint fund. I guess it is interest or something. But that was, - how old was my grandfather when he died, Mom?

Mom: Oh, I don't know exactly.
seventy or eighty?

GRANDFATHER ADOPTED BY QUAPAW TRIBE

But he was one of the, he was also adopted with the Quapaw tribe and took his allotment.

Julian's Mother: He was adopted wasn't he?

No he was, and he also worked as an interpreter and blacksmith. Is that right? He was the blacksmith and interpreter.

Julian's Mother: Oh yeah, he was the blacksmith at that Indian school.

And that Indian school man was up at Lincolnville wasn't it? I've heard them talk about it.

(Which Indian school?)

It was a boarding school. It was around Lincolnville, somewhere if I remember right. Jack knows exactly where it is.

(In Oklahoma?)

Yeah.

Man: Did he work as a surveyor?

I don't know Bob, I really don't know. But ah, he signed all the treaties when I was in school. Of course, we would have to dig up all those old treaties and I found all of the treaties he signed. But they were mainly with the Seneca and Shawnee tribes. And outside of that, I don't believe I know too much about, of course, I have a bunch of notes and things. And I'd hate to read 'em. But- - -
