

(Participant, lady:) Now was that among the Caddos?

(Participant, man:) Yeah.

Leader: The sooner we get..

(Participant, man:) I think...I think that with Mr. Tompkins we're going to be the other way..it's uh..I hope they will be that way but uh..

Leader: Well we..

(Participant, lady:) Well I know we stressed on that at our meetings (not clear)

Leader: Now on that system, of course we'll have direct supervision and we'll settle this every afternoon. In addition to, how many hours. And in the later stages of this thing we'll have someone there but your point system uh I would say that you're going to accept (not clear) boys.

Participant: Yes.

Leader: And you go out and set these (not clear) boys and turn the participant loose and then he will see that he gets this thing done. It's their duty. Uh and then you come back and look at your book and then you'll have to start (not clear). There I think your point system would be of benefit. If I'm gonna get out there and dog it and spend four hundred hours digging (not clear) and you're over there and really get after it. Or maybe you can con a brother-in-law into dropping a backhoe in there for a couple of hours why uh I think the job should be relative of..of the same work. Wouldn't you think so?

(Participant, man:) I would think so too. I think the point system is real good.

Leader: Whether it can call it labor or not I couldn't say.

(Participant, man:) I'm sure we'll have to relate points to dollars some way.

Leader: Hours, yeah.

(Participant, man:) Hours, yeah

(Participant, man:) But as far as you're concerned you don't care how many
